SIXTY AND SIX.

Fond, delicious momus—MANTIL.

Love of the moon,

Day of the morn,

Blithe little, blithe little daughter of morn!

While with thee ranging

Even I'm exchangin'.

Blithe of my blithe, blithe of thee,

Wings can't vis with thee,

Lightly I fly with thee,

Gay as the thinnest over theles;

Play is all grace,

Comie and gay,

Played as thou playest it daily with me.

Floating and dinging

Try merry a minge

Comes when the light comes, like that of the birds.

List to the play of it!

That is the way of it;

All's in the moonlight in the words—

Glad are we,

Heubert or Hayda,

Baile of Erin or merry Scotch lay,

Play is all even,

Some baile, some gal

Brought from sky—sury early steaming away.

Surely I know it,

Artist nor poet

Gusses my troubadour of jubilant hours,

Never for them they?

Never for them they?

Vanish in sunshins, like dew from the flowers

Years, I am glad of them!

Would to God we were

More and more, while thus mingled with thine.

Age, I make light of it!

For not the sight of it,

Time's but our playmate, whose toys are divine.

LUKE MASON.

A Thrilling and Romantic Story of the Late Civil War.

BY JOHN H. M. SICK,

AUTHOR OF "BROTHERS AGAINST BROTHER,"
"REBELL LAKEMAN," "WALTER BROWN-FIELD," "BANKER OF BUDWORLD," AND OTHER STORIES.

[Copyright, 1894.]

CHAPTER XIII.

THE BATTLE OF LANDING.

When Luke had come to the command of the Tennessee brigades he fully expected that his last moment had come. Had his captors been regular Confederates, his life should have been safe, but he knew that these men were rebels, and that his life, with those of his men, was in constant danger, with these prima-potenti objects blood and plunder, set all military law at defiance, and sabo or never spared a prisoner.

The captive was assigned to his fate, however. He had entered this army fully realizing the dangers which attended such a life, and taken his chances; now that fate had formed the decree against him he had determined to meet it nobly.

With Yank he had a frank blustering fellow, coming up to whom the prisoner said, his hands tied behind his back, "You've got ter swall what's all that is or it!"

He paused, expecting to see his captive go down like a mule and ignore merely that Captain Mason was firm and unmoved; his eye meeting his enemy's with a quirk. Finding that he made no answer, the guerrilla added:

"What do you say?"

"You don't, boy?"

"No; I am unable to defend myself."

"Wall, han't yer agen' ter beest?"

"No."

"Well, hang him ter once, boy; string 'im in, I say."

Half a dozen started toward the captive as if they would put the threat into execution, when some one evidently high in authority put a stop to the proceedings. Luke could not understand why his fate was deferred to a future time.

The arrival of a country boy with some alarming intelligence threw the guerrillas into confusion, and preparations were made for a hasty departure. Luke was placed upon a horse, and under a strong guard hurried off down the road into a wild, broken country, where the hills were so high that they looked like mountain peaks, and the prisoners from the south were safe.

They halted at an old mill on a creek, and the prisoner was given a breakfast, which, poor as it was, was heartily relished by the half-starved soldier. Luke was the only prisoner who had not been seen but two Union soldiers dead, he concluded that the others had made their escape.

It seemed that the guerrillas were not quite sure of their own safety even here. The officers held whispered consultations, and plotted and gesticated in an excited manner.

"If they intend to murder me, why don't they do it and have it over with?" said the prisoner, watching their strange maneuvers.

The day wore slowly by, night came, and the prisoner grew nervous. He reasoned that these men would choose darkness for their diabolical work. Murderers are always ready to perpetrate their crimes in the sound of horses' feet, coming down the road reached the ears of the captive, who was sitting at a window of the house that formed his prison, and he saw a small party of Confederate cavalry approaching. The horses of the rebels were mounted on horses that had been regularly trained to distinguish them from guerrillas.

Luke had little hope of their being able to release him, for they were outmanned by the rebels, and to one who had been even possible, he could not care to interfere with these partisan freebooters. It was too dark for him to distinguish faces, and when they had dismounted and dispersed among the buildings about the old mill he forgot his fears.

Others were coming and going, and the subdued buzz of voices constantly reached his ears. His room was dark, as neither lamp nor candle had been lighted, and the guard at the doors and windows looked like specters.

"Where is he?" a voice at last asked.

There was something peculiar in that voice; but Luke was unable to tell to whom it belonged.

The sound of footsteps approaching the door disturbed his ears, and next moment the same strangely familiar voice was heard shouting to the guard. Some one entered the apartment, and, coming to Luke's side, asked:

"Who is he?"

It was too dark for features to be recognized at even a foot.

"I am," the prisoner answered.

"I ain't yo Captain Mason."

"Don't you know me, Captain?" the voice asked in an uncertain

"No, though I have certainly heard your voice before."

"Don't ye remember Dick Sneed, the boy who used to tell us all the stories we told ye 'bout Captain Nott gittin' away?"

"Of course I remember you, but I thought you a bald-headed prisoner."

"I warn't no bad hert ex' leton. I only did what git at home! I done it, an' I'm here. I give the wado last night when youuns charged in."

"And you got away?"

"Yes, I run at the first, an' wasn't seen, except by a caised bigler who run me three times over, and until it was nearly daylight, and Albert, shootin' all the men, knocked him down wif' b'ut' of my gun."

Luke at once knew that the negro, who had been to Blackhawk, their mysterious guide, and the accomplice of his absence, who had been a good soldier.

"Did you kill him?" he asked.

"Dun know for sartin, but I do! the Confederate growled. "I fer never saw a dev'lo so longer ter kill anybody as I did, but a year so infernal dark that I couldn't see his face. I half believe he was some o'm them black dev'ls I use ter wallop when I war overseas."

A few moments' silence ensued, and then Luke said:

"I well, Sneed, did you expect to find me here?"

"Yes," the Confederate answered, and lowering his voice a little so that the guard might not overhear him, he added: "Cap'n Sneed sent me ter find you."

"What?"

"Ish! not so hord! I'll be ell up, with our plars. Ye see those fellers can't be managed like sojers. They're a set of blamed t'wolves! 'n murderers, 'n wouldn't think o' terger or' savenchun, yo know?" All the while he was talking in a mere whisper, and the stupid guard at the door, who was drawin' the blinds like a dog, who had been allowed to come to hear, heard all that he said.

"D'you git it? I'll be ell up, I'll come fur ye. Don't ye speak a word, nor even look around, but folter the boy. Now, d'ye mean what I'm sayin'?"

"Every word."

"Will yo carry 't out?"

"Yes."

"Good-bye."

And he was gone. Gone so suddenly and silently as if he had melted away into shadow. Luke half believed he was still there, and had found only darkness and the empty silence was broken only by the shrillings of the guard at the door. Gradually he mumbled snatches of a song in a hoarse, drunken voice, and Luke, who began to see through the plans of Albert and Dick, was shocked, troubled lest they had carried it too far.

At last, however, the guard became quiet, and his heavy breathing told that he had succumbed. Some one came in, and going to his bed, he combed him out. He did a small, soft, bath, and his hair was combed to the band of the bow, and he was led from the room. In the hall near the doorway, he stumbled over some one, and a half-unconscious curse came from him.

He was warned by a gentle pressure on his hand to be silent and careful. Another person joined them, and the three went softly from the house.

It was so dark that Luke could no more see them than he had been totally blind. They went on through the darkness, slowly, slowly making their way somewhere. They crossed a fence and were in the woods.

Not a word had yet been spoken, and beyond an intimation that he was among friends, he knew not whether he was being led to safety or death. At last they came to a house.

"Mount this one," said a low, deep, earnest voice which he recognized as Albert Sneed.

"Albert, is it you?"

"Yew, hush—mount; we have not a moment to lose," was the whispered answer.

There were four of them, and they mounted horses and started on. Albert and Dick, in front, himself and the boy bringing up the rear. The horses were soon climbing a muddy road.

"Not a word a' word!" said Major Nott, in a cautious undertone. "A few rods further, and a voice from the darkness called:

"Two reined in their horses."

"Who goes there?"

"A friend with the countergun."

"Advance and give it."

"As they rode forward Albert whispered: "Stonewall River," and they were told to pass.

Reaching the top of the hill they found the ground a little more level, and put their horses to gallop, for Luke's rescuers knew that a rebel ride was before them two or three miles away that met a body of guerrillas returning.

"Halt, thar! Who youuns' un' wha gwine?" their leader cried, when they were within a few rods of them.

"The way to my command," Albert promptly answered.

"Yo' all! Hell yer, Major, yed, get out!"

"I must join yo command, and we've got fast horses, so I don't think there's much danger of the Yanks catchin' us. Did you men hear the hand of my men?"

"No."

"That is strange. They were to meet me on the Currituck road. We'll hurry on, for we can't afford to miss them."

The friendly cloud of night concealed Captain Sneed's uniform from view, and many of the new soldiers were young men fresh from the farms, counting houses, shops, and stores, who had never yet smelt powder, but who were to be made to do so.

East, and the other leading to all the cotton regions of the South. Still another railroad connected Corinth with Jackson, in West Tennessee.

Grant at once saw that he obtained possession of Corinth the enemy would have no railroad for the transportation of men and supplies, and that running out from Corinth was rendered. In fact, it was the great strategic position at the West between the Tennessee and the Mississippi rivers, and between Nashville and Vicksburg.

General Grant at once put all the troops at Savannah in motion for Pittsburg Landing.

It was his intention to march from this position in Corinth as soon as Buell with his army, from the Ohio, should arrive, and to strike the rebels at the same time.

Grant's plan was to be to the south of Corinth.

He obtained a force of 15,000 men.

AN ALABAMA JUDGE.

Justice of the Peace Denison's Many Queer Decisions.

For Eighteen Years He Dealt All Laws
Trying Murder Cases and Divorce
Suits and Resigned at Last to the Sorrow of All.

An Alabama merchant, says the New York Evening Sun, who lived many years in a country town in that state, entertained a party of friends last night with some stories of the countryman who held the office of Justice of the peace down there for many years.

"Jerry Denison didn't know anything about law books—never read one in his life," he said, "but he had a big heart and level head. His neighbors all loved him, and when he was elected Justice of the peace in Mulberry township, Ala., they knew he would deal out pure and unadulterated justice without any legal forms or formalities. Jerry held the office eighteen years, being reelected eight times without opposition."

"Three different governors threatened to remove him, five grand juries investigated him, but every time he came out with colors flying, and Judge Denison, as every body called him, became one of the best-known men in the state."

"The Judge's library consisted of a Bible, a form book and an almanac, but in time he picked up a score or more of legal phrases from the lawyers who practiced in his court. He had little patience with lawyers, especially when they attempted to secure a ruling in their client's favor on legal technicalities."

"When his neighbors quarreled and threatened to go to law, Judge Denison always advised them to settle the matter outside of court, if possible, and save costs. If they persisted and brought suit, he often made them regret their desire to take his advice by his bill for costs. When people went to law in his court somebody had to pay the costs."

"Lawyers often exhausted his patience by asking a witness seemingly unnecessary questions, and then the witness would take a hand, and either ask the question himself or answer for the witness."

"No case was too large or too small for Judge Denison. He tried men for murder and let them off with ten dollars and costs, granted divorces, sentenced prisoners to six and twelve months hard labor on his farm, and ended his career with a score of trials resulting from family quarrels, suits for debts of ten cents, suits that had no legal basis or statute; in fact, all was grist that came to his mill."

"One day a case was on trial and the plaintiff's lawyer was asking the witness unnecessary questions. Tom Simpson, the judge's neighbor, took the stand and the lawyer began:

"What did I understand you to say when you said?"

"Tom Simpson."

"Mr. Simpson, where do you reside?"

"Here Judge Denison interrupted, and turning to the lawyer, said: 'His name is Tom Simpson; he lives on Turkey creek; moved there from Winston county fourteen years ago; he owns four dollars and a bit; he owns nothing; it's nigh on to a year now he married old man Seth Allen's gal Nancy.'

"Maybe you know Seth; he's a brother of Steve Allen that runs for sheriff two years ago; Seth lives at the old Bascom place; bought it from Dan Smith; give him four hundred dollars and a sparrowed house for it. Now go with the case, Mr. Lawyer, and Tom, mind you tell the truth. I knowed an' your old man did, too, when he was a honest man than old Bill Simpson never breathed the breath of life.'

"After this complete biography of the witness the lawyer proceeded directly to the facts of the case."

"The first murder case Judge Denison ever tried was that of a negro who had killed another colored man. The murdered man had a bad reputation and there was some suspicion of the dead. When the case was called the defendant had two lawyers and a score of witnesses, while numerous friends of the dead man were present to see that justice was done. Judge Denison did not propose to waste valuable time on negroes, so he called on the prisoner to stand up."

"Now, there ain't no use denyin' that you killed that negro," he said, "for the proof's all agin you; but we needed some law to keep him in this settlement, and I guess everybody's glad to be rid of him. But courts can't work for nothin', prisoner, so I'll fine you ten dollars and costs."

"The fine was paid, and while this disposition of the case excited some comment nothing was ever done about it, the people of the neighborhood seeming to agree with Judge Denison that it was a good way to get rid of the negro."

"The Judge had more respect for the Bible than he had for the law, and when negroes appeared as witnesses in his court he made them kiss the almanac. 'I don't allow no reflections east on the Bible in this court,' he explained one day when a lawyer objected to having colored witnesses sworn on the almanac."

"Judge Denison's form of oath and his form of the marriage ceremony were both original and not exactly according to the code, but both were effective. When he administered the oath to a witness he said: 'You swear here, in the presence of God's Amity and this court to tell the truth, so help you Jesus. Amen.'

"His marriage ceremony was something like this: 'John, you love this woman, Mary, you love this man? Then you are my no' wife, and the cost is two dollars.'

"His first divorce case came up after he had been in office eight years, and the principals happened to be a couple he had united in marriage some five years before. The husband was the plaintiff and the wife had engaged a lawyer. When the husband told how his wife had pulled his hair, boxed his ears, and pulled his nose to a pulp, the judge promptly declared them 'put asunder according to the law and the Gospel.'

"But, your honor, you have no jurisdiction in this case," suggested the defendant's attorney.

"What?" asked the judge, sternly—"no man had ever before dared question one of his decisions."

"You have no authority in this case. The law does not give a Justice of the peace power to grant a divorce."

" Didn't I marry this couple?"

"Yes, but—"

"Then I'll unmarry 'em, an' you are fined ten dollars for bein' in contempt of this court. I'd like to see the law that gives me the power to splice people an' then says I can't unsplice 'em when they've got Scriptural proof."

"The judge stood and no appeal was ever taken."

"In the trial of a suit for damages where the plaintiff claimed he had been swindled in a horse swap the defendant demanded a jury to try the case and Judge Denison had a jury summoned. It was summer and court was held in the shade of a big oak tree but the judge's office was too small to hold all the spectators. When the suit was over, the judge sent the jury to a thick clump of bushes some distance away to make up their verdict. At the end of an hour they returned and reported that they could not agree.

"But you must agree," said the judge, and he sent them back to the session of the bushes. Again they returned with a verdict and reported the suit were for the plaintiff and four for the defendant.

"Well, that's a verdict. A majority always rules in this country," and the judge entered a verdict for the plaintiff on his docket.

"Once a negro was on trial before Judge Denison for carrying concealed weapons. He had a lawyer who wanted to prove that the prisoner's life had been threatened and that he had circumstances the law allowed him to carry weapons. The evidence all in his hand said: 'May it please your honor, I have here a recent decision of the supreme court in a case similar in every way to this one, and the court ordered the acquittal of the defendant.'

"Then I'll overrule the supreme court an' fine the defendant fifty dollars and costs."

"Once a civil case was tried by Denison, when two lawyers were engaged. When the evidence was all in, the attorneys held a brief consultation to decide upon the order in which they should speak. As the first one rose to address the court, Denison cut him short by saying: 'Now you fellows just wait till I decide this case an' then you can spout law all day if you want to.'

"Vagrants of all degrees, and every man charged with a criminal offense who was not able to pay a fine, Denison would sentence to terms of hard labor on his farm."

"When asked once for an explanation of such unwarranted proceedings, his reply was that the law allowed his costs in every case he tried, and if a man had no money, how was the court to get the cost if he didn't work it out? To this logical opinion there was no reply, and no one ever interfered with the judge afterward."

"The remarkable feature of Judge Denison's simple administration of justice was that he usually managed to get at the truth of a case, and never allowed any legal technicalities to influence his decisions. If a man was guilty he was punished in some way, and if innocent he was discharged. True, the judge decided a great many cases over which the laws of the state gave him no jurisdiction, and in many ways he violated the letter of the statutes, but his decisions were always just from a moral standpoint, they were allowed to stand."

"Several times dissatisfied parties to civil suits and lawyers called the attention of the governor or the grand jury to Denison's method of doing business, but every investigation resulted in a vindication for the judge. Once he was called before a grand jury and asked if he knew what law was."

"Yes," he answered, "I have a lot of law put in before me, have to keep honest people on their rights."

"I just thought that they allowed the judge to go. After eighteen years' service he declined to accept the office again, to the regret of his friends."

"I think," said the business man, "that I will for a time retire and take a rest." "Are you overworked?" asked a friend. "Yes," he replied, "that's what I have been worked by three tramps, a book agent and several other people within the last three days, and I don't think I can stand any more."

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Wilfred and Lady Anne Blunt have returned from Egypt for the summer, bringing with them six new horses for the stud. Mr. Blunt has arranged with William Morris to have a new volume of the poet's published for him by the Scotts. It will be issued in the course of the summer and will consist principally of songs and lyrics.

—When in France recently the Kaiser donned his Borassan student's uniform of white leather breeches, Wellington boots, black velvet jacket, and little round cap, and unexpectedly made his appearance at the "Commers" of his "peeps brethren," as they are called. He participated in the beer-drinking as of old, and smoked his huge pipe in conformity with time-honored custom.

—von Moltke was passionately fond of Wagner, and the German capital rivaled each other in their eagerness to play for the field marshal's delectation. He was unpatriotic enough to dislike Wagner, and confessed in his simple, soldierly manner that, having been brought up on Mozart and Schubert and the old school, he could not understand the "music of the future."

—The queen of Madagascar lately took her yearly bath, a function said to be performed by the queen of hyenas, the king of vultures, and the king of drums. It is presumed that she was still recognized upon emerging, for afterward she was greeted by her subjects as she moved among them "gorgeously arrayed, wearing all the crown jewels and sprinkling the spectators with water taken from the bath."

—Mrs. Wanamaker's chief object in visiting Europe this season is said to be to see her great-grandchildren, the little son and daughter of her son, the Rev. George Wanamaker, who make their home in Paris. The little four-year-old granddaughter is an especial favorite, and there is hardly a steamer leaving New York for the French ports during the season but carries among the mail a letter or press note from the little maid from her grandmother.

—Burme-Jones, the English artist, gives his vivid imagination play in his last picture, "Earth and Moonland," the picture representing the big dark rising on the moon's horizon and casting shadows on the arid surface of the smaller planet. In the foreground, resting on a ledge, are the bones of a monstrous man—the last conception of the moon. The artist's conception is that of the world and the interpretation weird.

—King Otto, Bavaria's crazy sovereign, is physically healthy, but is threatened with a voluntary situation in consequence of his mental infirmities, the law allowing him to carry weapons. The evidence all in his hand said: "May it please your honor, I have here a recent decision of the supreme court in a case similar in every way to this one, and the court ordered the acquittal of the defendant."

THE NEW PARTY.

President Polk's Paper Defines the Status of the Alliance Toward the New Party.

We want to say that, if the new party succeeds at Cincinnati, there will come from such sweeping no harm to democratic principles. With one single unimportant exception the principles laid down by the conference at Cincinnati are democratic to the core. We want this to be distinctly understood, that only real people's party is a party of creation.

The question what will the alliance do with the new party is on the lips of tens of thousands of anxious people today. Well, it ought not to take much wisdom to answer that question. The new party has adopted the alliance demands into its platform. Does any one who has read the intelligent article in the Delta County Alliance think that the alliance will not do the same?

Mt. Sterling is just now armed with a five-cent fake known as the Sentinel-Democrat "Punch and Judy" show.

Tom Havens sits at Frankfort
And gently pulls the string,
And Cassidy, at the other end,
Just "cuts the pigeon-wing."

Lake Norman is business and stage manager, and he's working the show for all its worth.

No bird has a keener weather-eye than the bee-martin, and "that annoying bee-martin," the HAZEL GREEN HERALD, now forewarns the Mt. Sterling Punch and Judy and other would-be newsmen, that Monday, August 8, 1891, will be an extremely cold day—for the new Constitution. And the bee-martin always sees cold weather a coming.

There are some mighty good things in the new Constitution, but the bad ones cover 'em like a cloud.

THE NEW CONSTITUTION.

Delegates Swango and Quirkham Defend the New Instrument.

I have read your editorial on the new Constitution, in which you endeavor to convince us that the adoption of it by the people of the State of Kentucky on the 8th of August would be detrimental to the interest of the people of this State. Will you permit me to discuss a few points briefly in your valuable paper. You state that under the new Constitution much of the poor man's property now exempt is subject to taxation. In this I leave you to agree with me. There will be as much property under the new Constitution exempt from taxation to the ordinary housekeeper as under the old, but to the contrary the taxable property of the wealthy will be largely increased (see Sec. 176 of the new Constitution). It exempts all the growing crop and most in value of personal property and other personal property of a person whose family is worth more than $250 from taxation. The old law exempts more than this, but it only affects the more wealthy class. This will have to be regulated by the General Assembly, they to say what property shall be exempt and the value of each article. I leave you to say as you say, nearly $90,000,000 that the greater part of this will come from the wealthy, and will increase our revenue to such an extent that the rate of taxation will be reduced, all of which is in the interest of the small tax-payer.

As to the sale of lands in the mountains, or the price of the same, the new Constitution forbids the sale of lands in his humble home against the monied corporations that wish to buy up the same lands and crowd out those not able, financially, to protect themselves against the monied powers and are finally forced to sell to them at ruinous prices. The new Constitution forbids that any railroad company or corporation shall hold lands in the mountains necessary to carry on their legitimate business. This only leaves the lands in the hands of the honest citizen to buy and to use the vast deposits of coal and minerals as well as the timber for their own use.

As to the restriction of local legislation, that is one of the most important sections of the Constitution. Some of the things of this importance will be appreciated when it is stated that in the last ten years the General Assembly has been in session 689 days at a daily cost of nearly $1,063 and had they been required to pass only general laws and restricted to sixty day sessions as required by the new Constitution, there would have been a saving to the State during that time of $24,164. These facts are sufficient to show to any voter the importance of having the General Assembly limited as to time.

Railroads will be built under the new as well as the old Constitution, but if the people are compelled to bankrupt themselves by voting a tax to build railroads for rich corporations to grow richer on, then we had better adopt the new Constitution, and thereby cut off all chances for a ruinous tax being levied upon us, and the least among other plan by which to secure railroads.

The States of Missouri and Indiana have far more stringent restrictions against towns and counties subscribing to railroads and going in debt to them than those in our proposed Constitution, yet there has been built four times as many miles of railroads in these States in the past twenty years as in Kentucky. Railroads, monied powers and monopolies know their interests and study them, and if the proposed Constitution is against the interest of the poor man and the people generally, why is it that all the corporations and those who are willing to serve their interests so seriously oppose and fight against the adoption of it?

No one is more interested in the development of our mountains, and no one worked harder than I did in the Constitutional Convention in trying to have the titles to our lands settled, and if I believed this Constitution detrimental to our interests and development I would oppose it.

The State has aided some sections of the State in building turnpikes and it proved to be a bad investment for the State, only tends to increase our taxes, and experience has taught that it is detrimental to the tax-payer. And the people of working class outside the walls will be forced to go to the employment of the laboring class or working man, and they should be kept inside the walls. The proposed new Constitution does not prevent towns and counties from aiding in the building of turnpikes. So, when any county or town desire to aid in building turnpikes they can do so under the new Constitution, and not the old.

There are many sections in the proposed Constitution that I voted against, and some that might have been left out, but take it as a whole and it is decidedly in the interest of the masses of the people at large, and restricts the monied powers and corporations of every description to such a degree that it brings the people in nearly every walk of life, from the farmer, the mechanic, the merchant, and all classes. The proposed new Constitution as a whole is an able document, and only has to be read and studied in its entirety to be appreciated.

G. B. SWANGO.

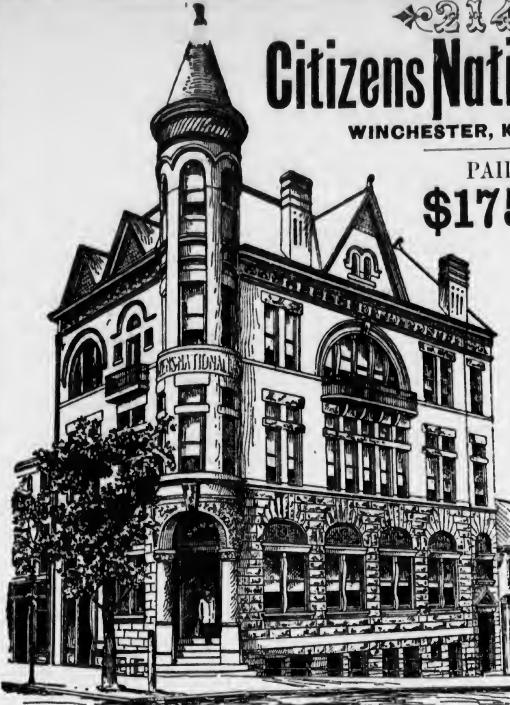

June 30, 1891.

ZEEL, KY., June 29, 1891.
Editor HERALD, Hazel Green, Ky."

Dear Sir.—For the information of your many readers, and especially the Alliance Brotherhood, I will give a few of the many good points contained in the new Constitution, and some of the benefits the great mass of our people will receive by ratifying the new instrument at the election, which I think surely will be on the 1st of September. The following favors its adoption: If it is ratified there will be no more "Con. Cons." It abolishes "vest-pocket" characters; it provides for a uniform code of laws; it establishes a secret ballot system, which if properly carried out in detail by the Legislature and executive by the officials, will completely and officially stop corruption at the ballot box.

It makes all charters revocable by the proper authority; whereas, the present constitution is silent as the grave on the subject; chartered rights, franchises or privileges once granted under it are beyond the reach of any legal power in the State; whereas, the new instrument will give the profits voluntarily relinquishing their rights, which corporations have never been known to do in these degenerate days. The new Constitution limits county and city taxes and thereby will prevent a reckless administration from ruining the people. (If such should ever happen, the new instrument will provide a uniform system of courts throughout the State; whereas, the present constitution is so vague that there are scarcely two counties in the entire State that have the same laws in force, and often different laws and different courts exist in different parts of the same county.) It provides for a uniform labor law against free labor; "no keepers" inside the prison walls. It provides that no more counties or cities can be ruined or made bankrupt by being taxed to build railroads for the benefit of rich corporations. It adds $600,000 to the common school fund, and if adopted, will, at the expiration of five years, forgive all debts of the State, and add $1,000,000 to the school fund, and leave us all in the quiet possession of our homes after that time, (so far as those claims are concerned) and that will do more for the development of Eastern Kentucky and the satisfaction of the people than anything that can be done. It will be a greater inducement to the investment of large capital than all the railroads in the State will be able to pay for the purpose. It reduces Grand Juries one fourth and saves to the treasury $17,000; it cuts off one half of the Justices of the Peace, and saves $60,000; it abolishes the office of Public Printer and saves $10,000, and thereby touches the pocket of the Courier-Journal; it provides for having the annual audit of all our accounts at one place, and saves $10,000; it restricts the legislative session to sixty days, and saves over $40,000; total saved over $40,000. It taxes banks and other corporations same as other property, and increases revenue $150,000, and this is why they kick and cry "save the farm." Grand total saved to the State, $287,000 per annum.

As to the restriction of local legislation, that is one of the most important sections of the Constitution. Some of the things of this importance will be appreciated when it is stated that in the last ten years the General Assembly has been in session 689 days at a daily cost of nearly $1,063 and had they been required to pass only general laws and restricted to sixty day sessions as required by the new Constitution, there would have been a

Do You Need Money?

If so, you can get something better than dollars from us. The completion of the K. U. R. R. to Jackson has cut us off from a large wholesale trade heretofore had by us in several counties East, and left on our hands an immense stock of goods, which we are compelled to unload, and in order to do so we are determined to make prices do the work, prices which will render our patrons happy and make competition howl. We offer to Country Merchants Extra Inducements, and guaranteed to them lower prices than they ever got before. We are overstocked and must unload. Remember we will duplicate any bill, with freights added, either wholesale or retail, East or West North or South, up hill or down.

We are now receiving such lines bought for CASH at bottom bargains as will fill every department. New, Fresh, Seasonable, Choice and Cheap. We can astonish you with lines of CHEAP TABLES covered with goods at half prices! (A new departure.) And more than this, we will have commencing Saturday, May 30, 1891, at 9 a. m., at which every thing goes at reduced prices; come and bring your neighbors, one and all. Having secured a large boundary of Blue Grass for the year, we will exchange goods or pay cash for live stock. You can settle notes or accounts with the same. As the prices we name merely give us a chance to get our money out of the goods, we cannot afford to credit. Goods will be sold for cash only, or country produce, live stock and school claims taken in exchange. We shall open a new department under the charge of Miss Laura Rawlings and Miss Lula Day, which will be fully stocked with Fine Millinery, Notions, Ladies' Furnishing Goods, Wall Paper, Carpets and Oil Cloths, School Books and Supplies, Pictures and Frames, etc., etc.

Miss Rawlings is a thoroughly competent Milliner and Dress Maker, and we offer you a City Stock to select from. You can get as fine and stylish Millinery and Dresses here as anywhere, and at the very lowest prices. Yours, &c.,

We are authorized to announce WEEDEN C. CLETON as a candidate for Sheriff of Wolfe county, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce W. A. BYRD of Torrent, as a candidate for Sheriff of Wolfe county, at the Annual Meeting, 1891, to be a Democrat, and expects to remain one; he does not believe in fraudulent means of securing county office, and is honored to the position of Sheriff will perform the duties regardless of person or party.

Mrs. H. F. Pieratt has our thanks for a nice mess of beans.

James P. Hall, Town Marshal of Campton, paid Hazel Green a flying visit Tuesday.

Rev. Mr. Hawthorne will occupy the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church in this place on next Sunday.

Miss Lizzie Haney has our thanks for a mess of beans, cucumbers and apples, the cucumbers being especially nice.

Rev. J. Z. Haney is in Carter county, preaching to the people of Olive Hill and other places with a view of locating there.

Dr. Taubel reports the following birth: To Rev. James E. Wright and wife, on Wednesday, July 8, a beautiful baby girl.

Mr. Ryd, who is announced for Sheriff at the head of our local columns, was a riding Deputy Sheriff under Sheriff G. T. Centers, if we mistake not, and is a gentleman of good business qualifications, as his long service with Mr. Centers in the capacity of salesmen and manager of his business evidences.

With this issue appears the advertisements of the hack line between this place and Rothwell, W. R. Tabor, of the latter place, being sole proprietor. All the gentlemen connected with the line are courteous and accommodating, and can confidently commend that hack to the traveling public as the best and easiest means of travel where ease is the object.

Jones Vansant, one of the best clerks in Kentucky, is announced in one of our papers in the position of Circuit Court Clerk of Wolfe County, and so well has he filled that position as a deputy for three years past that all who know of his work are ready to exclaim, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into thy reward," and that reward will be awarded him by an overwhelming public approval.

J. G. Trimble of Mt. Sterling, came up Saturday and Sunday went to on Silverville, where he assisted in locating a site for the new court house for that town, the location being on the farm of Mrs. Gardner. Mr. Trimble is a man of the retired class, and to town he ever says, "he thinks the people will make a mistake unless they ratify the action of the Commissioners in locating it. He returned to this place Tuesday, and left for home Wednesday.

WOLFE COUNTY F. & L. U.

Gov. Drake and Jones Vansant endorsed. Pursuant to a call of the President of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Association of Wolfe county, the delegates of the various sub-unions of Wolfe county met at the Court House at Campion, at 1 o'clock p. m. July 4, 1891. The house was called to order by County President James Sebastian, who stated the object of the meeting, and on motion, James Sebastian was chosen Chairman and James Vansant was chosen Vice-Chairman and Secretary. Thereupon the following delegates were appointed a Committee on Credentials: W. B. Duff, Campion Lodge No. 181; M. C. Spencer, Spruce Gap Lodge No. 2059; W. B. Vaneable, Greenville Lodge No. 1529; J. T. Crain, Cliffton Lodge No. 185; A. G. Bradley, Antioch Lodge No. 365; W. B. Bowman, Pine Hill Lodge No. 291; James F. Clegg, Campion Lodge No. 1529; C. M. Fallon, Daysboro Lodge No. 1574; A. F. Johnson, Proffit Lodge No. 360; W. T. McNabb, Sandfield Lodge No. 279; W. M. Graham, Hoyle Lodge No. 157; and it was made the following report:

We, the Committee on Credentials, being here to call the meeting, find that the F. & L. U. of Wolfe county are represented from all the sub-unions except Morning Star Lodge and Upper Stillwater Lodge, and that each Lodge is entitled to two votes in this meeting for the endorsement of candidates to fill the offices of Circuit Court Clerk and Sheriff of Wolfe county without regard to the political affiliations of said candidate, and to nominate said all the voters of Wolfe county to assist in electing said candidates to said offices. W. B. DUFF.

One of Committee.

Thereupon, by motion of the delegates from Greenbrier Lodge No. 1529 withdrew from the meeting.

No. 1529 presented the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we as the Farmers and Laborers Union of Wolfe county, have implicit faith in the honesty and integrity of George W. Drake, and believing that he possesses all the qualifications necessary to make a good Sheriff, and we therefore endorse him for Sheriff of Wolfe county as a man capable of discharging the duties of Sheriff of said county satisfactorily to the people, and pledge him our undivided support in his race for said office; and we hereby request all the voters of this county to assist in electing him to said office.

Thereupon, by motion of W. B. Duff, Campion Lodge No. 1529, passed the following resolution, which was adopted:

That, whereas, we as the Farmers and Laborers Union of Wolfe county, have faith in the honesty and integrity of Jones F. Vansant, and believing that he possesses all the qualifications necessary to satisfactorily discharge the duties of the office of Circuit Court Clerk, we therefore, for and recommend said Jones F. Vansant to the voters of Wolfe county as a suitable man to fill the office of Circuit Court Clerk, and pledge him our undivided support in his coming race for said office, and hereby request all the voters of Wolfe county to assist in electing him to said office.

On motion the meeting then adjourned.

JAMES SEBASTIAN, Chairman.

JONAS F. VANSANT, Secretary.

To the Voters of Wolfe County.

In compliance with the earnest solicitations of numerous friends, as well as to gratify a pardonable ambition of my own, I take this opportunity of announcing to myself as a candidate for the office of Circuit Court Clerk of Wolfe county, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

I desire to say to those who are not acquainted with me that I have had a practical experience as Deputy Clerk for eight years, and for three years as a Notary Public, and am a member of the Circuit Court's office of this county, and beg leave to refer you to the attorneys, officers and the records of your courts as evidence of my qualifications for the office to which I aspire.

Hoping that my claims will merit your approval, and trusting that I may receive your hearty support, I will, as far as I am able, do my best to serve you.

I am desirous of being the office honest, faithfully, fairly and impartially with all persons with whom I may officially come in contact.

I am, very respectfully your obedient servant,

JONAS F. VANSANT.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Ailments, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints.

This has been tested and found curative power in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellowmen. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by adding with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

An Important Correction.

Through a piece of gross carelessness of P. B. Phillips, in our Fair catalogues reads, "with J. M. Robinson & Co." and it should read "with Carter Bros. & Co." We hope all interested will note the correction, and make due allowance for a rush of work night and day for a month past.

Editor Herald, Hazel Green, Ky.

Watch Them, Superintendents.

Within the past two weeks two men, one from Hart and the other from Wolfe county, have made efforts to surreptitiously obtain from the Public Printer's office copies of the questions prepared by Prof. Pickett and the State Board of Education, for the examination of persons for the office of teacher in the public schools. The name of the Hart county man is known, and has been reported to the Superintendent of Schools in that county. The same official in Grayson county may safely keep an eye on him also, and can have his name if he desires it. The Wolfe county man, whose name is unknown, but who is a tough looking specimen, was driven from the office yesterday after he had made an effort to corrupt one of its employees.—Frank Capital.

Take Notice.

All persons knowing themselves indebted to G. B. Swango must settle it at once. His accounts have been placed in my hands for collection, and I shall expect them to settle. If they do not I will warrant them and they can then pay debt and costs. I will take any kind of stock, at good prices. Respectfully but earnestly yours.

ARTISTIC WALLS.

How to Select Wall-Paper that is cheerful and effective.

The highest art is now displayed in the designs for wall-papers, and there is no disowning the magnificent appearances of some of these latest patterns when properly placed on the sides of the room. Large figures in old gold, especially scroll work in borders, are used. In selecting wall-paper it should be chosen in accordance with good taste and in most cases the question to decide is whether it is to form a decoration for itself or whether it is to become a more background for pictures. In either case the colors should be subdued in tone, and two shades of light drab or silver-gray will be found the most appropriate for this purpose. Where water-color drawings are hung in a drawing-room paper of embossed white or cream color, with very faint patterns, will be most effective. The patterns should also be selected with reference to the place. Where a large part of the wall is to be presented to the eye a greater play of line in the patterns may be attractive, but in all other situations the patterns should be comparatively simple. It is a mistake to make the wall-paper decorations of the same color of the furniture. Instead of making the furniture the dominant and highlighting it, it should oppose it. Contrast is as essential as simplicity to good taste in household decoration.

In selecting papers for the walls one should not trust simply to the pattern-books. A paper that has been ordered will often look darker or lighter after it is hung than it did in the pattern-book. In order to avoid disappointment in this respect it is advisable to take several lengths of the paper and suspend them here and there on the wall, and notice carefully the general effect it has upon the eye and the room. The leaves of certain plants conventionally treated are very effective decorative forms. The ivy, maple, oak and fig leaves are beautifully adapted to this purpose, and they come in large and small designs of wall paper. Where two shades of the same color are employed, and qualities of effect is especially desired, the ornament that should be used, but very little damage can be done if and drawings and other things are to be hung about it the pattern should be hardly discernible from a little distance.

The most dreary method of decorating the wall of a sitting-room is to cover it all over with an unrelieved pattern of monotonous design. Yet many housewives who are careless about such matters, and who are not fond of the art, will do this every spring before their paper is changed. Paper-hanging should no one be allowed to cover the whole space of a wall from skirting to ceiling. A plain slice of plain color, either in paper or distempers, should be left to a height of two or three feet from the floor. A light wood molding, stained or gilded, should separate this from the paper above. A second paper, with a patterned border below the ceiling and filled with meadow-ornament, is always effective, but, of course, always involves more expense. Gold, when judiciously introduced, is always a valuable adjunct in the design of paper hangings, but it frequently doubles and sometimes trebles the price of a piece.—N. Y. World.

A SMART LITTLE GIRL,

And a Young Widow Who Must Have Been the One who Embarrassed Her.

There is a young girl living a widow in South Minneapolis, who retains a 5-year-old girl as the only pledge of her dear departed. The little one has just begun to learn her alphabet. A gentleman called upon the widow the other evening. Of course, the fond mother wanted to show off her child. Taking up a newspaper and pointing to the big letters in an advertisement the mother said:

"What letter is that?"

"A," responded the child.

"What comes after A?"

"B,"

"And what comes next?"

"C," lisped the little one.

The inquiry was pursued still further, but along toward the end of the alphabet the little girl lost her bearings and never answered a question.

Finally the gentleman thought he would ask a few questions. He began with this:

"What comes after T?"

The child looked him straight in the eye as she answered:

"A man to see mamma."

The lesson in English literature was not prolonged.—Minneapolis Tribune.

She Was Teasing Him.

A lady was in the kitchen early one morning, saw a plate and knife and fork, the former of which had evidently contained cold rabbit pie. The lady strongly suspected a certain policeman of having snipped off it, and the following conversation took place between her and the cook:

Mistress—Mary, what has become of the cold rabbit pie that was left?

Cook—Oh, I didn't think it was wanted, so I gave it to the dog. Mistress (anxiously)—Does the dog use a knife and fork then?

Cook (unashamed)—Not very well, ma, but I'm teachin' him to.—London Tit-Bits.

The Merchant—Beginning on the first proximo, Miss Josie, I will advance you to the position of wife. I presume you will accept?" Miss Josie (the typewritten girl)—"D'you intend to increase my wages?"

The Sweet-Scented Magnolia.

When a train reached Mobile the other day, the air in the cars became freighted with the odor of bananas, yet there was not one in sight. Out of doors one saw the dogwood blossom, the japonica in bloom, and here and there magnolias and wisterias in flower. The smell was of none of these flowers. Its source was mysterious, but it was discovered that the people have a habit of carrying pocketfuls of the aromatic blossoms of the magnolia fuscata. They look like the blossoms of our flowering shrub, but nothing that we know of in the north has an odor at once so powerful and so sweet. This was what perfumed the train for two hundred miles.—N. Y. Sun.

—A little eight-year-old Irish boy in one of our public schools was reproved by his teacher for some mischief. He was about to deny his fault, when she said: "I saw you Jerry." "Yes," he was "strapped" at Chicago. The telegram did not give the Holyoke man's full name, but it named his business and his business address. After thinking over the boy over a few months he concluded that he was a haberdasher, and sent a telegram to his brother-in-law in St. Louis asking if he was at home. He soon received an affirmative reply and the invitation "Come and see me." It was a shrewd game, but it did not work.

—A curious story was told on the streets by one John Seller, representing himself as living in the Trinity bottoms about fourteen miles east of Ennis, writes an Ennis, Tex., correspondent. He said that last Wednesday a colored woman living along the river bank lost her two-year-old child, a boy just able to walk, and search was made, but unsuccessfully for the mother gave it up for lost. Further, at the same hour while returning from an excursion found the babe, alive and well, perched on some driftwood, drifting placidly toward the gulf, about twenty miles down the river; that it took the fishermen two days to discover the mother and restore the babe to its home.

—A well-known Holyoke business man, says the Springfield Republican, received a telegram a few days ago, bearing the signature of his brother-in-law, asking him to send him $50, as he was "strapped" at Chicago. The telegram did not give the Holyoke man's full name, but it named his business and his business address. After thinking over the boy over a few months he concluded that he was a haberdasher, and sent a telegram to his brother-in-law in St. Louis asking if he was at home. ### Sketch of the Life of B. F. Davis.

Benjamin Franklin Davis, Secretary of the Kentucky Farmers and Laborers Union, was born near West Liberty, Morgan county, Ky., Sept. 13, 1837. He received a good education in the country; began teaching school at the age of 16, and taught of fall and winter for ten years, working on the roads during the winter. In 1852 he moved with his father to Ezel, where he became a member of the Grange in 1857, and served as Secretary in that Order as long as it continued its active operation in his county. In 1861 he became a member of the Men's Corral E. Wheeler, of Menifee county, which union has been blessed with five children.

He became a charter member of Pine Grove Union, 17 August, 1861. This was one of the first Unions in the Southern part of Kentucky. He was elected Secretary of the organization and has since continued in that position.

In the winter of 1861-62 he was commissioned as an organizer by the President of the National Alliance, and contributed largely to starting the Alliance work in Kentucky. He became a member of the Kentucky State Central Committee in 1862, and was elected Secretary at Ezel in June, 1868, and was selected Secretary at the organization, a position which he held until the consolidation of the Wheeling Alliance. He became the first Secretary of the consolidated Union. He has served as Chairman of the Committee on Constitution and By-Laws, and held other offices in the organization. He was a delegate to the National meeting held at St. Louis in December 1869, and gave his hearty support to the work of that Convention.

He has always lived on a farm and his sympathies have been with the toiling people. Mr. Davis is a man peculiarly fitted for the position which he now holds. Of Future Prospects.

"We have found in no body a more capable or efficient officer than Secretary F. Davis of the State Alliance. It seems to us that he has a good name and no better record for the proceedings of the meeting." Personally, Mr. Davis is kind, courteous, and courteous. His close attention to his duties and the success attending his efforts in the capacity in which he has served his people, has made him many warm friends. He is a man of sterling integrity, a strict patrism, Mr. Davis is one of the most popular men in the Order, will, doubtless, live to realize the ultimate success of his efforts and fruition of his hopes. W. S. Morgan, in History of Wheel and 2. H. Hale.

Meeting of United Memorial Union.

The United Memorial F. & L. convened at Maytown Union, May 26, 1891, and was called to order by President Wheeler, tested, and found correct.

Minutes of the previous session were read and approved. Roll of officers was called and read, followed by the report of M. Wheeler, President; G. C. Clark, Secretary; Martin Layne, Chaplain; H. B. Kash, Asst. Secretary; W. G. Pleasant, Assistant Auditor; H. L. Moore, Treasurer. The vacancies were filled by the appointment of Jordan Willis, Vice President, pro tem; R. M. Wells, Auditor, pro tem; S. P. Murphy, Auditor; George W. Sergeant, Asst. Auditor; H. S. Helton, Jacob H. H. and H. P. Lawson were appointed a Committee on Credentials. H. B. Kash, M. Wells and W. G. Pleasant were appointed a Committee on Resolutions.

The Committee on Credentials reported the following Unions represented: Maytown Union, Black Creek, Pleasant Springs Union and City Union. W. M. Alderson, sent as a delegate from Pine Grove Union.

Adjusted at 11:30 A. M., to take on some of the blessings of life which were reported by the members of the committee.

House was called to order again at 1:30 P. M., tested, and found correct. F. G. Morgan, of Maytown Union, delivered an address which was very instructive and full of thought to the farmers and laborers of the country.

The Committee on Resolutions reported the following:

Resolved 1. That we endorse the action taken by this meeting.

Resolved 2. That we extend to the good people of Kentucky our sincere thanks for the hospitable treatment received at their hands while in their midst.

Resolved 3. That the proceedings of this meeting be prepared and sent to the HAZEL GREEN HERALD for publication which was adopted.

A regular drill on rural services was conducted by President Wheeler and Vice President Willis.

The Union then adjourned in due form to meet with Maytown Union, in Maytown, the second Saturday in August, 1891, at 9 o'clock A. M. C. W. Clark, Secretary M. U. Maytown, Ky.

Another Letter from Centreville Union.

Mr. F. D. Davis, editor of the F. & L. Department: At our last stated meeting the election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: J. M. Ward, President; A. H. Hale, Vice President; J. H. McElroy, Secretary; T. J. Anderson, Treasurer; C. Murphy, Chaplain; W. G. Pleasant, Auditor; H. B. Kash, Assistant Lecturer; J. M. Oldfield, Sergeant-at-Arms; G. W. McElroy, Auditor, and D. C. Clark, Auditor. Delegates to the State Central Convention of the County Union were also elected, and we hope to see a general turnout of the brethren as that meeting that we may better understand in farming and all agricultural pursuits.

We hope that Rice will become to be a cheap article in this country yet, as the present price of 15 cents per bushel is not much pocketed in the West Legislature. And as this Rice is of our own Kentucky growth we think it will suit the men of the country exactly. We have reverence to Hon. J. J. McElroy, of Maytown, Ky., as a candidate for Representative in this district, and as we are personally acquainted with Mr. Rice we shall fully recommend him as worthy of their position. Let us hear from others. Respectfully, J. F. McGRIGRE.

Five Good Reasons

Why the Sub-Treasury plan should be established.

1. Because it destroys the "power of money to oppress." No corner can be won on money when the power is flexible.

2. Because it will prevent general depression in prices during the season in which the farmer is a seller.

3. Because it takes money on the most needed, and wealth is best used of having it, as this government now does, on the representative of debt.

4. Because it will benefit all classes alike and break class distinctions.

5. Because its object is to increase the money in circulation when there is an increased demand for its use. And by increasing the value of money to offset the increased demand, prices will not be increased.

Warehousing and money lending are incidental to the bill, but are not objects.

Quarterly Meeting of State Officers.

The regular quarterly meeting of the officers of the Farmers and Laborers Union of Kentucky was held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel in Louisville June 25 to 27. The following officers were present: T. T. Gardner, President; A. H. Hale, Vice President; L. E. H. Wheeler, Secretary; W. G. Pleasant, Auditor; C. Murphy, Chaplain; W. H. B. Kash, Assistant Lecturer; W. W. Holland, Business Agent; W. E. Heddinger, Assistant Business Agent; T. J. Anderson, Auditor; H. B. Kash, Executive Committee; M. D. Davie, R. E. Robinson, and M. R. Gardner, Judiciary Committee; E. K. Ezel, Auditor; W. H. B. Kash, H. C. Brown, and H. H. Hale, Farmers Home Journal, an others. Quite an interesting meeting was held to the satisfaction of all present.

Changes of Climate

Kill more people than is generally known. Particularly is this the case in instances where the constitution is defective, and among our immigrant population seeking a home in the United States.

In the winter of 1861-62 he was commissioned as an organizer by the President of the National Alliance, and contributed largely to starting the Alliance work in Kentucky. He became a member of the Kentucky State Central Committee in 1862, and was elected Secretary at Ezel in June, 1868, and was selected Secretary at the organization, a position which he held until the consolidation of the Wheeling Alliance. He became the first Secretary of the consolidated Union. He has served as Chairman of the Committee on Constitution and By-Laws, and held other offices in the organization. He was a delegate to the National meeting held at St. Louis in December 1869, and gave his hearty support to the work of that Convention.

He has always lived on a farm and his sympathies have been with the toiling people. Mr. Davis is a man peculiarly fitted for the position which he now holds. Of Future Prospects.

"We have found in no body a more capable or efficient officer than Secretary F. Davis of the State Alliance. It seems to us that he has a good name and no better record for the proceedings of the meeting." Personally, Mr. Davis is kind, courteous, and courteous. His close attention to his duties and the success attending his efforts in the capacity in which he has served his people, has made him many warm friends. Another Letter from Centreville Union.

Mr. F. D. Davis, editor of the F. & L. Department: At our last stated meeting the election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: J. M. Ward, President; A. H. Hale, Vice President; J. H. McElroy, Secretary; T. J. Anderson, Treasurer; C. Murphy, Chaplain; W. G. Pleasant, Auditor; H. B. Kash, Assistant Lecturer; J. M. Oldfield, Sergeant-at-Arms; G. W. McElroy, Auditor, and D. C. Clark, Auditor. Delegates to the State Central Convention of the County Union were also elected, and we hope to see a general turnout of the brethren as that meeting that we may better understand in farming and all agricultural pursuits.

We hope that Rice will become to be a cheap article in this country yet, as the present price of 15 cents per bushel is not much pocketed in the West Legislature.

And as this Rice is of our own Kentucky growth we think it will suit the men of the country exactly. We have reverence to Hon. J. J. McElroy, of Maytown, Ky., as a candidate for Representative in this district, and as we are personally acquainted with Mr. Rice we shall fully recommend him as worthy of their position. Let us hear from others. Respectfully, J. F. McGRIGRE.

Five Good Reasons

Why the Sub-Treasury plan should be established.

1. Because it destroys the "power of money to oppress." No corner can be won on money when the power is flexible.

2. Because it will prevent general depression in prices during the season in which the farmer is a seller.

3. Because it takes money on the most needed, and wealth is best used of having it, as this government now does, on the representative of debt.

4. Because it will benefit all classes alike and break class distinctions.

5. Because its object is to increase the money in circulation when there is an increased demand for its use. And by increasing the value of money to offset the increased demand, prices will not be increased.

Warehousing and money lending are incidental to the bill, but are not objects.

Changes of Climate

Kill more people than is generally known. Particularly is this the case in instances where the constitution is defective, and among our immigrant population seeking a home in the United States.

In the winter of 1861-62 he was commissioned as an organizer by the President of the National Alliance, and contributed largely to starting the Alliance work in Kentucky. He became a member of the Kentucky State Central Committee in 1862, and was elected Secretary at Ezel in June, 1868, and was selected Secretary at the organization, a position which he held until the consolidation of the Wheeling Alliance. He became the first Secretary of the consolidated Union. He has served as Chairman of the Committee on Constitution and By-Laws, and held other offices in the organization. He was a delegate to the National meeting held at St. Louis in December 1869, and gave his hearty support to the work of that Convention.

He has always lived on a farm and his sympathies have been with the toiling people. Mr. Davis is a man peculiarly fitted for the position which he now holds. Of Future Prospects.

"We have found in no body a more capable or efficient officer than Secretary F. Davis of the State Alliance. It seems to us that he has a good name and no better record for the proceedings of the meeting." Personally, Mr. Davis is kind, courteous, and courteous. His close attention to his duties and the success attending his efforts in the capacity in which he has served his people, has made him many warm friends. He is a man of sterling integrity, a strict patrism, Mr. Davis is one of the most popular men in the Order, will, doubtless, live to realize the ultimate success of his efforts and fruition of his hopes. Minutes of the previous session were read and approved. Roll of officers was called and read, followed by the report of M. Wheeler, President; G. C. Clark, Secretary; Martin Layne, Chaplain; H. B. Kash, Asst. Secretary; W. G. Pleasant, Assistant Auditor; H. L. Moore, Treasurer. The vacancies were filled by the appointment of Jordan Willis, Vice President, pro tem; R. M. Wells, Auditor, pro tem; S. P. Murphy, Auditor; George W. Sergeant, Asst. Auditor; H. S. Helton, Jacob H. H. and H. P. Lawson were appointed a Committee on Credentials. H. B. Kash, M. Wells and W. G. Pleasant were appointed a Committee on Resolutions.

The Committee on Credentials reported the following:

Resolved 1. That we endorse the action taken by this meeting.

Resolved 2. That we extend to the good people of Kentucky our sincere thanks for the hospitable treatment received at their hands while in their midst.

Resolved 3. That the proceedings of this meeting be prepared and sent to the HAZEL GREEN HERALD for publication which was adopted.

A regular drill on rural services was conducted by President Wheeler and Vice President Willis.
